Different nights. Clear shares.

Four friends share a €720 stay for three nights. Alex and Sam stay all three; Jo stays two; Remy stays one.

€80

Per person-night

9

Person-nights · 3 + 3 + 2 + 1

Person-night split: divide €720 by 9 person-nights, then multiply €80 by each person's nights. This shares the whole booking in proportion to nights stayed.

Person	Nights	Calculation	Stay share
Alex	3	3 × €80	€240
Sam	3	3 × €80	€240
Jo	2	2 × €80	€160
Remy	1	1 × €80	€80
Total	9		€720

Agree on the split before booking. The next page shows another option: sharing each night between the people who stay that night.

Another fair option: split each night

If each night costs €240, split that night between the people who use it. Here Jo stays nights 1–2 and Remy stays night 1.

Night	People staying	Each pays
1	Alex, Sam, Jo, Remy	€60
2	Alex, Sam, Jo	€80
3	Alex, Sam	€120

Two ways to share the stay

Person	Person-night split	Nightly split
Alex	€240	€260
Sam	€240	€260
Jo	€160	€140
Remy	€80	€60
Total	€720	€720

That gives Alex €260, Sam €260, Jo €140 and Remy €60. Both methods total €720. Agree on the method before booking; they answer different ideas of fairness.

See who owes what.

Using the person-night split from page 1: add a €120 dinner for Alex, Sam and Jo, plus a €60 taxi for Jo and Remy.

Worked shared expenses · all amounts in EUR

Person	Stay	Dinner	Taxi	Owes	Paid	Balance
Alex	240	40	0	280	720	440
Sam	240	40	0	280	120	-160
Jo	160	40	30	230	60	-170
Remy	80	0	30	110	0	-110
Total	720	120	60	900	900	0

A positive balance means the person should receive money; a negative balance means they still owe money.

In this example

1. Sam pays Alex €160.
2. Jo pays Alex €170.
3. Remy pays Alex €110.

The €900 total reconciles: €720 stay + €120 dinner + €60 taxi. Alex receives €440; all balances then return to zero. Check the expenses together before settling.
